

Analysing

You're good at analysing me and you're nearly always right
But that's not the point
What I really need is someone to hold me tight
You make your diagnosis with your detailed explanations
But what I really need is love tonight with no recriminations

I'm grateful for the time you take
I know you wanna set me free
Just remember there are painful changes taking place in me
I guess it'll take a little while
To release the chains that bound me so from time to time
What I need the most are some loving arms around me

Well, I'm sorry if I hurt you - I don't mean to be that way
It's just hard at times to reconcile what I do with what I say
It's slowly getting through to me the many things you told me
But instead of talking, there'll be times
I'd prefer you just to hold me

Now certain things need to be said so say them to my face
But don't let your honesty exclude
My need for your embrace
I agree with everything you say and I'm painfully aware
Of all my faults and failings - I just need to know you care

Now words can be such a barrier
And sometimes they can grieve
So what you say with tenderness I'm more likely to receive
Your honesty is good for me - I just hope your realising
I still need to know you love me
When you've finished analysing